

Alex Sion

With over 18 years of experience in business, technology and marketing strategy for financial services firms, Alex Sion is poised to become one of the industry's greatest disruptors.

Alex's wealth of financial services experience, his deep digital industry knowledge and proven success in creating and leading technology teams to world-class implementation is second-to-none.

CEO Movenbank

Adjunct Professor at Georgetown University for Digital Marketing

Alex Sion is set to 'take on' and change the banking world as we know it, impacting every aspect of the way in which banks operate and interact with their customers.

After having advised large financial institutions, startup organizations, and industry groups, Alex now works as the Head of Market Growth for Global Consumer Banking with CTI ventures.

As an entrepreneur, educator and strategic digital advisor to leading institutions such as Citigroup, Barclays, Royal Bank of Scotland, Wharton School, Georgetown University and General Assembly, and a co-founder of global banking phenomenon Moven, Alex is one of the leading voices in Fintech.

Alex is a recognized thought leader, speaker and panelist in the financial services space. He has spoken at large financial services conferences such as American Banker, BAI, Finnovate, Forrester Customer Experience Form, and Association of Financial Technologies. He has also spoken and conducted workshops at global leadership forums and executive summits for firms such as: Toronto Dominion, Merrill Lynch, Morgan Stanley, Bank of Montreal, Royal Bank of Scotland, Barclays, Regions Bank, and BBVA.

my topics...

The New Possible Personal Finances and Wealth Management

Traditional views on financial and life planning have been based on rigid assumptions on the way people live, work and plan for the future. But a new phenomenon has developed, and the lifestyles of the next wave of customers are far from traditional with many in the "Gig Economy" earning secondary and tertiary streams of income. They want different things; moving jobs, freelancing, renting out their properties - saving and investing their money in new ways.

Rigidity won't work and predictability is a thing of the past. So to everyone and anyone in the business of money management including banks, financial services organizations, retail insurance companies, tertiary education and even government institutions... take heed and keep up!

The New Impossible is about creating a new trajectory; it is a call to action challenging the status quo of banking and financial services industry. It's time to throw away the old map and design new products, processes and customer experiences that will actually meet the needs of this market.

Alex provides a roadmap for servicing the millennial generation with a new approach for personal financial services.

Fintech Innovation Getting the Elephant to Dance

What does it take to drive innovation in perhaps the most stubbornly conservative of all industries: Banking & Financial Services?

First, you need a vision of the future.

Second, you need the courage and confidence to re-write things that have been written in stone and to get those stones thrown at you.

Third, you need to forget everything you know, then stop... look... and listen. Who says that disruption and innovation are the privileged territories of the young, brash and idealistic with little to lose?

In this session, Alex Sion, co-founder and President of Moven - the world's first downloadable bank - will share his experiences in launching one of the most innovative and disruptive firms in the U.S start-up community. Learn about and be inspired by the story of the journey including:

▶ How he turned this ground-breaking innovation into a workable concept

▶ "Selling" to the market, investors and customers

Something You Can Bank On: 5 Predictions for the next five years in Retail Banking

The retail banking industry is at a key turning point. The cost of managing customers through massive branch networks is outstripping many banks' ability to generate profits.

Meanwhile, a jaded consumer base increasingly interacts with their banks through virtual channels. Ultimately, these two forces will lead to new distribution models, customer experience platforms, crowd-sourced business models and other game-changing innovations that will redefine the banking industry.

In this session, Alex Sion, President of Moven, will share his predictions for the next five years in retail banking as well as share key recommendations on what financial institutions must do in order to stay ahead of the curve, survive and thrive.

